

We help here and now

As a charity and aid organisation, the Workers' Samaritan Federation (ASB) is politically neutral and non-denominational. We help everyone – regardless of their political allegiance, ethnic background, nationality or religious affiliation. With our help, we enable people to retain their independence to the greatest possible degree. We provide quick, uncomplicated help to all who need our support.

Including in mental health work, an area within the Ruhr Regional ASB Federation that has been continually developed and enhanced since 1986. In addition to the Assisted Living, we have a Contact and Advice Centre, a day-care centre, a range of employment opportunities (LT 24) and a residential and care facility.

Assisted Living

For people with a mental illness we provide advice and support within their own home and in their familiar surroundings in Essen.

Working together, we develop bespoke, needs-based solutions aimed at independent living.

We orientate ourselves here on your wishes and ideas. We are happy to provide you with no-obligation advice on this in an initial face-to-face meeting.

If you opt for Assisted Living, a face-to-face meeting follows at which we plan a detailed set of actions and objectives. Known as the Help Plan Process, we agree in this the specifics of the assistance to be provided and the number of hours involved. Throughout the period of assistance you have a personal point of contact available to you, who has specialist training and can help with any issues.

The services provided are an income-dependent provision. Where income is low there is the possibility of costs being covered by the social welfare agency.

We support independent living and running of the home.

We provide advice on all financial and official matters.

We assist with all health issues and crises.

We develop ideas for occupational activity or other ways of structuring the day.

We plan and promote social contact and leisure activities.

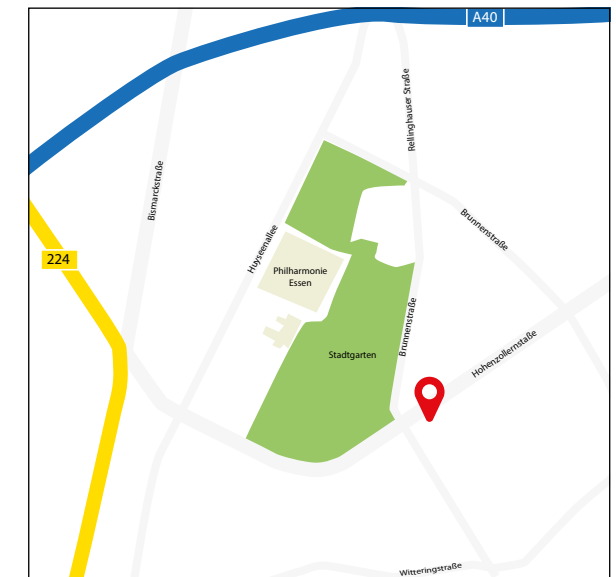

We act as a link to other support services.
